

Warwickshire Climate Change Partnership

Responses to the questionnaire

If there were no energy, fuel or power (electricity, gas etc.) for one week, what would you miss most?

- Most respondents in their 20's would miss hot water the most followed by heating in winter.
- Most respondents in their 30's would miss TV the most followed equally by heating in winter, lighting, hot water and hot food.
- Most respondents in their 40's would miss lighting the most followed by electronic forms of communication / media (radio, computer, music).
- Most respondents in their 50's would miss heating the most followed by hot food.
- Most respondents in the 60's and 70's would miss hot water most followed by hot food.

- Most female respondents would miss heating most followed by hot water.
- Most male respondents would miss heating most followed equally by lighting, hot food and electronic forms of communication / media (radio, computer, music).

- Overall, most respondents (regardless of age or gender) would miss hot food and water most, followed by heating then lighting.

If there were no energy, fuel or power (electricity, gas etc.) for one week, what would be the best thing about it?

- Most respondents in their 20's think that the best thing would be better community spirit, followed by a slower pace of life.
- Most respondents in their 30's think that the best thing would be better community spirit followed equally by slower pace of life and less pollution.
- Most respondents in their 40's think that the best thing would be no TV followed by peace & quiet.
- Most respondents in their 50's think that the best thing would be a slower pace of life followed by peace and quiet.
- Most respondents in the 60's, 70's and 80's think that the best thing would be peace & quiet followed by less pollution.

- Most female respondents think that the best thing would be better community spirit followed by no TV.
- Most male respondents think that the best thing would be a slower pace of life and less pollution.

- Overall, most respondents (regardless of age or gender) think that the best thing would be a slower pace of life followed by better community spirit.

